

Fighting for the dream

The person who influences me most

I was born in a countryside where my grandma's house lies in, but I grew up with my parents in a city nearby. Every month, I would visit my grandparents with my mom and dad, and I really enjoy the wonderful time with my elder sister, who has a great influence on me.

Her name is Jeanne Chiu, and she is two years older than me. She grew up in another city when she was a child, so we didn't have much time playing together. However, since our families would pay regular visit to my grandma's house, we can still have some time with each other. My sister is very creative, outgoing and laughs a lot, and I will never feel bored in accompany with her. I can still remember the moment when we picked up red bricks and did some fantastic drawings on the ground of the yard, the moment when we were playing our favorite game – hopscotch, keeping laughing all the time, and the moment when the night fell, we lit the sparklers and held them in the hand, swinging them from side to side. Indeed, my sister added much pleasure for my childhood.

Many years later, when we started to study in high school and were busy on our academic performances, our time together had been cut down. As we know, for most Chinese high school students, only when we do well in the National College Entrance Examination can we be admitted to top universities. But unfortunately, my sister didn't do well in the exams, and was finally admitted into Nanjing Audit University, majoring in English. However, she was not satisfied with her current situation for she wanted to study finance very much. As a result, she made up her mind to work hard for an opportunity to switch her major. I can notice in her Wechat Moments that she got up very early, listened very carefully in class and took well-organized notes. She devoted almost all her time and efforts to her study and became top students in her first year in college. At last, she got the opportunity to change her major in finance. After that, she got even more hard-working. She has received several scholarships from her school, and has passed most subjects of ACCA (The Association of Chartered Certified Accountants).

My sister's stories really touch me. Just as the saying goes, 'where there is a will, there is a way.' We will finally succeed in realizing our dreams as long as we are determined to put our time and efforts into it. So as a freshman in Nanjing University, I will take my sister as my example. No matter what difficulty I meet, I will always be willing to take on new challenges. I'm sure there is always a bright future right there waiting for me.
